"Some one has said the chief products of Japan are valets and dogs, and if the next consignment." Thus spoke Mrs. Fourth ave., Brooklyn, are the pride of the City of Churches.

Mrs. Leonhardt's beautiful Japanese spaniels do not stay in the kennels; deed, they do not stay put anywhere for two consecutive minutes. The house belongs to them from cellar to attic, and one encounters bunches of black and white fluff everywhere-on the piano, on the staircase, in the easy chairs or on the mantle over the fireplace-and one is bound to admit that they are extremely

Omar is the bright particular star in the constellation, although it is by right of beauty alone. He has not nearly so sweet a disposition as any of the others. Omar has a cunning little trick which might be called getting back at the judges. When he is in the show ring he on parade every minute and always wins a blue, but woe betide the judicial personage who essays to pick him up. He will jump on your lap and give every evidence that you meet with his approba-tion, but be advised; do not attempt to pet him. Omar wishes to make all the advances that are to be made.

Omar is one of the most beautiful dogs in America. He is an ideal size, perfectly parked, with a beautiful face and plume. He is an imported dog, and, like all Japs, is of unknown origin. If one may judge from his actions, however, he came straight from the royal family
